Pair due in court on possession and assault charges

TWO men are due to appear in court after being charged in connection with an assault in Harlow.

Jordan Ogoazi, 19, of Chingford Lane, Woodford Green, was charged with a string of offences including wounding with intent, actual bodily harm and possession of an offensive weapon.

Meanwhile 20-year-old Wael Rzaigui was charged with violent disorder and the possession of a weapon and drugs.

The charges relate to an incident in Post Office Walk at 5am on Sunday, September 3 after police were called to reports of a fight by the ambulance service.

Injuries

Officers who attended the scene found that three men and a woman had been assaulted.

A 21-year-old man was taken to hospital with life-changing injuries, while another 21-year-old was treated for minor injuries.

The other victims did not require further medical assistance.

Ogoazi and Rzaigui were both arrested on September 22 and are due to appear at Chelmsford Magistrates' Court on Friday, October 20.

A third man, Thokozani Shiri, 19, of no fixed abode, was charged with two counts of assault, threats and a public order offence – he appeared at court on Friday, October 9.

He is next due in court on Monday, February 26, 2018.

Woman wins £1.8m after NHS hospital blunder

Princess Alexandra Hospital, where the medical blunder occurred

Mum left disabled after being starved of oxygen during procedure

By Michael Mutch
newsdesk@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A YOUNG mum has won a multi-million-pound NHS compensation payout from a Harlow hospital after she was left disabled by a medical blunder.

The woman was taken into Princess Alexandra Hospital in 2013 after suffering a collapse related to diabetes.

However, during the resuscitation process, a tube that was supposed to be fed into her lungs to help her breathe was instead fed into her stomach.

By the time the mistake was discovered, she had suffered oxygen starvation and acute brain damage, London's High Court heard.

Approved

On Monday, after Princess Alexandra Hospital NHS Trust admitted liability, Judge Rosalind Coe QC approved a settlement of the case.

Barrister Michael Mylonas QC said the woman would receive a lump sum of £1.8m, plus index-linked payments of £275,000 a year for the rest of her life.

He added that the cash would fund the intensive care regime she needs and would give "peace of mind" to her loved ones.

Paul Rees QC, for the trust, said: "It is right that, in a public forum, a full apology should be given to the claimant and all those who love and support her."

"I can't turn the clock back, but they are entitled to a public apology for the fact that she did not receive care of the quality she was entitled to."

Addressing the woman's husband and son, who were in court, Mr Rees added: "They are very impressive individuals indeed."

Love

"There is no doubt that the commitment, love and devotion they have shown is outstanding. The husband is a remarkable man and I was struck by his dignity and bearing."

"It is, frankly, due to them that she is in her own home and being cared for as she is. They deserve a public tribute, and I make it."

Mr Mylonas said the father and son had given the woman up to 15 hours a day of care and suffered financial difficulties before the trust admitted liability.

The QC thanked the trust for its apology, but added: "It is late in the day."

Approving the settlement, Judge Coe told the husband and son: "The commitment you have shown has rightly been described as remarkable."

A pensioner died after being hit by a motorbike in Cambridge Road

Fatal accident 'not a surprise' to resident

A RESIDENT near Cambridge Road, Harlow, where a pensioner was killed after being hit by a motorbike says he was "not surprised" that the fatal crash happened.

An 82-year-old man was hit by a blue and white Suzuki motorbike whilst crossing the road near Harlow Mill at about 4.35pm on Tuesday, October 3.

The elderly pedestrian was taken to hospital but died a few hours later.

Dangerous

A 29-year-old man from London has been arrested on suspicion of causing death by dangerous driving and remains in custody.

But an elderly resident who lives in Honeymeade, close to where the accident happened, said he was "not surprised".

He said: "The motorbikes on this road, they drive at break-neck speed. They really are dangerous. There is a sign post on that road that says 'Think Bike'. Why should we think when they don't give a damn about anyone? They don't think at all about pedestrians who might be crossing the road, or other vehicles."

Officers are looking for anyone who saw a blue and white motorbike on Cambridge Road between 4pm and 4.40pm to come forward.

If you witnessed the crash, have any dash cam footage of it or have any other information please contact the Serious Collision Investigation Unit on 101 or email collision.appeals@essex.pnn.police.uk.

Five years after tragic fire which claimed the lives of Husband's plea for help to find who killed his family in blaze

star@hertsessexnews.co.uk

FIVE years on from a fatal fire which killed six members of the same family, detectives have issued a fresh appeal for help with the case.

Dr Abdul Shakoor was the only survivor of the fire which claimed the lives of his wife, 44-year-old Dr Sabah Usmani, and five children – daughters Hira, 12, and Maheen, three, and sons Sohaib, 11, Muneeb, 9, and Rayyan, 6.

Asleep

The family were asleep at their terraced home in Barn Mead, Harlow at 1.40am on October 15, 2012 when the fire swept through the downstairs of the property.

A silver Ford Focus was set alight at the same time.

The home was quickly engulfed by flames and smoke.

Desperate to raise the alarm and get help for his family, Dr Shakoor managed to jump from an upstairs window.

Tragically the fire took hold and Dr Shakoor's wife and children did not survive.

Detectives launched a murder investigation, called Operation Shakespeare, but to date they have been unable to bring those responsible for the fire to justice.

Five years on the police, supported by Dr Shakoor, are continuing to appeal for anyone with information to come forward.

Dr Shakoor said: "Every day I think about my wife and children, the pain has never gone away."

"It is impossible to put in to words the pain and grief I have

Dr Sabah Usmani and her five children were all killed in the fire at their home endured at the loss of my entire family.

"I will never understand why somebody did this and I live in hope that someday someone may come forward with information."

mother and her five children, new appeal by detectives in murder investigation

HOW YOU CAN HELP...

DETECTIVES are continuing to appeal for information in relation to the following lines of inquiry:

- A white man aged in his late teens/early 20s on a bicycle was seen in the area when the house and car were set alight. It is thought he could be a key witness.
- The family laptop, a black Toshiba Satellite, was taken from the house in a burglary. This has still not been located. Do you know where the laptop is or was?
- The laptop was fitted with a two-pin lead because it was bought in Saudi Arabia. The laptop bag and lead were later recovered near to the scene between Whitewaits and St Michael's Close. Did you see these items being dumped or did you notice any suspicious activity in these areas at the time?

- Attached to the laptop lead was a shaver adapter plug. This did not belong to the Shakoor family, which suggests someone tried to use the plug. Did you have a shaver plug missing from your home at the time?
- Do you know anything about the silver Ford Focus which was set alight?
- In November 2012 a person rang Harlow police station from a phone box and left a message about that fire. Are you that person?
- Also, in November 2012, a piece of paper about the murder investigation was left on a shelf in Boots in Harlow. Did you leave that piece of paper?

If you do know anything, please contact Essex Police."

Senior investigating officer DCI Stephen Jennings, who is now leading the investigation, said: "No one will ever be able to imagine the trauma, horror and grief that Dr Shakoor has endured."

"Five years on and we are still committed to solving this murder investigation and securing justice for Dr Shakoor and his family."

Answer

"We know the answer to this investigation lies within the community of Harlow."

"Five years on and loyalties that once existed may have changed."

"If you do know anything about the events of that night and who was responsible please, for the sake of Dr Shakoor and his family, do the right thing and come forward."

The murder investigation has been one of the most difficult and challenging carried out by Essex Police.

Statements

To date, more than 70 police officers and staff have worked on the case, nearly 500 people have given witness statements and 1,800 exhibits were collected and stored.

■ If you have information, please contact the Major Investigation Team at Brentwood on 101, email scd.appeals.essex@essex.pnn.police.uk or call Crimestoppers, anonymously, on 0800 555 111.

Victim seriously hurt after assault with metal pipe Man is jailed after attack with weapon

By Michael Mutch
star@hertsexsexnews.co.uk

A TRAVELLER encamped in Harlow has been jailed for attacking a fellow traveller with a metal pipe, leaving him with a collapsed lung.

Albert Moore, 46, appeared before Chelmsford Crown Court last Friday, to be sentenced for inflicting grievous bodily harm to Thomas Breaker, using a metal pipe.

An argument ensued between the two men after Mr Breaker confronted Moore on April 28.

The nature of the argument is unknown, but it is alleged to have been related to their children. Moore then armed himself with a pipe that he picked up from the back of his van.

After Moore picked up the pipe, Mr Breaker told him: "Why don't we have a normal fight?"

Marc Brown, prosecuting, said: "Those words indicate a degree of aggression by Mr Breaker, but it can be argued that this was as a result of Moore arming himself."

Moore stepped forward and attacked Mr Breaker, issuing four blows to his body. Moore struck his victim once after he fell to the ground.

Mr Breaker was taken to Princess Alexandra Hospital where his wife, who witnessed the attack, gave a statement to the police after her husband declined to comment. He was discharged from hospital with a suspected broken rib but his condition deteriorated overnight and he found it difficult to breathe.

Mr Breaker returned to hospital the following day where doctors found he had suffered more broken ribs than initially thought and a collapsed lung.

They placed him into an induced coma to recover and he has since made a full recovery.

Police arrested Moore on May 2 after they found a metal pipe matching the description of the one used in the attack in his van.

Defence barrister Michael Stradling told Judge Emma Peters that it was not Moore's intention to inflict such damage to Mr Breaker and that his actions were completely out of character.

He said: "He has no relevant convictions. He has never served time for a conviction.

Albert Moore was jailed

"The act does seem to be out of character. Your honour has read a lot of references that relate to that submission.

"He is a defendant who can have a suspended sentence. He is thought of well by those who know him and care for him."

Despite this, Judge Peters told Moore that although she accepted that he is a man of good character, his offence was 'extremely' serious and that his actions exceeded the custody threshold.

She said: "You're a man in your forties who has no previous convictions of violence, but on this particular day what you were to do was extremely serious.

"I accept that you had no intention to cause these significant injuries. Nonetheless he spent time in an induced coma. A serious assault with a weapon that causes this man to sustain serious injuries.

"I do think it crosses the border into greater harm. The fact you armed yourself with this metal pole and used it as a weapon is one that makes the case of higher culpability.

"Clearly there are a number of people who think highly of you. I have read the references that say what a good man you are and how out of character this is.

"But this was a serious assault with a weapon. The question is, do I suspend the sentence or issue one of immediate custody? Let me be quite clear. It is my view that nothing short of immediate custody will suffice."

Judge Peters sentenced Moore to 26 months in prison, with half to be spent in custody.

Life is looking sweet for firm

TASTE OF SUCCESS:

Company has to find more space

By Michael Mutch
michael.mutch@essexlive.news

THANKS to Willy Wonka, chocolate factories are thought of as magical places. A world of pure imagination. But did you know there is one right on your doorstep?

Tucked away in a corner of Harlow is The Grown Up Chocolate Company, producing chocolates to send around the world.

The company is a luxury specialist in the chocolate market, formed in 2010. It reimagines favourite chocolate bars enjoyed as children and uses quality ingredients tailored for adult taste. It has 30 employees.

Palate

"I woke up with the idea in my head to take the bars we enjoyed as children and recreate them using beautiful ingredients or at least take the traits from those bars," said the company's founder, James Ecclestone, who also runs Casemir Chocolates, supplying a number of the UK's top restaurants and hotels.

"I suppose when you eat Mars bars or Snickers and so on as child it just tastes sweet. But as you get older your palate develops.

"When we started selling chocolates as a retail business we were exposed to some amazing French and Belgian products and you can taste the difference in quality and texture and high cocoa compared to what we in England are used to."

Consisting of 36 per cent pure cocoa solids, its milk chocolate bars contain double the chocolate quantity than the UK market standard. True to its small business ethos, all products are handmade in its Harlow factory, in Lovet Road.

The company's net profit has increased by 2,400 per cent since 2012 and it is set to hit its 2016-17 target of £2.5 million in earnings, which will be a 107 per cent increase from last year.

Its products are distributed across the world with a clientele including some of the most luxurious businesses. Virgin, owned by Richard Branson, buys around three million bars a year. Luxury hotels like The Ritz, The Savoy and Gleneagles are customers and even the House of Lords buys products from the Grown Up Chocolate Company.

Mr Ecclestone said: "If you sell a quality product and you're proud of it, then a lot of your boxes are ticked in terms of a career."

"When you are selling a quality product you are often dealing with quality customers and they treat you as a guest rather than a supplier."

"We export about 35 per cent of what we make. We go to Australia, North America, Sweden, Norway, France, Ireland, Germany, and the Netherlands."

"When I was in Germany a few weeks ago and I went to a supermarket chain who stock our product, it was amazing to see the German version of our bars on their shelves."

"I know we're not very big but when those pallets go off to Germany and France and so on I get quite a thrill from it."

Success in business requires you to come up with something that has got to be different and a lot of companies nowadays make their success from allowing customers to make their ideas become a reality.

The Grown Up Chocolate Company website allows customers to do just that, providing a feature that allows you to create your own chocolate bar. You can choose the ingredients, the chocolate, and you can even create your own wrapper and it has proved a massive success for the company.

large order of quantities it has to get through, coming up with new ideas can be quite a challenge, but interacting with its customers has helped the company to create inspiring new flavours, according to Mr Ecclestone.

"That's gone amazingly well," he said. "I think that element of customisation the customer demands or is prepared to accept is so different now. We've moved on from retailers deciding what they are going to put on the shelves and deciding what to sell through focus groups.

"You don't need those any more. It's totally customised. I think if you can make a customised product you can do quite well from it.

"New product development tends to come from a customer more than it comes from us.

Challenge

"Like Virgin Atlantic, for example, saying they would like a pumpkin chocolate for Halloween. We hadn't made one before, so we made one.

"We like that challenge, it is what makes the business so interesting. If you're just churning out boring chocolate bars seven days a week that would be totally uninspiring."

Mr Ecclestone admitted that due to the rapid expansion of the company and the size of orders it receives, it has to find more space.

There is a possibility that the company may have to move away from Harlow, but he hopes this will not be the case.

He said: "I'm so proud to be an Essex manufacturer and a UK manufacturer who exports.

"Short term, we have to move. We need more space. That has to happen before September next year. If we work forward our orders until August next year we can see we will run out of space about that time so we have to act now to move.

"I'd like to stay in the confines of Essex because I don't particularly want to move miles away, but it all depends on the availability of the space.

"Ideally I want a new build and access to motorways."

Livewire Trust encourages young people in Harlow to take up theatre

Two performers from the Livewire Trust

Theatre group looks to future

Youngsters act out vision of town's arts to inspire discussion of next 70 years

By Michael Mutch
star@hertsexnews.co.uk

A THEATRE group of youngsters took to the main stage at The Harlow Playhouse with a play that examines the next 70 years of Harlow.

Last Thursday The Livewire Trust performed Our Town, Our

Future, a play that explores what would happen to Harlow if the Arts and Community Groups continue to be underfunded and closed down.

Harlow was designated a new town in 1947. This year a series of events has been held to mark the town's 70th anniversary.

Livewire was asked to perform their play as part of the Harlow is 70 celebrations.

Opportunity

Sam Ashford, creative director for Livewire, said ahead of the performance: "This is a major opportunity for our young people to show our town what we can do; to engage our community in a discussion on how we want our town to develop in the next 70 years.

"We are delighted that The Harlow Playhouse have invited us to perform and have offered so much support.

"We are also proud to be part of the Harlow is 70 celebrations and look forward to showing our town what Livewire is all about."

The Livewire Trust is a community theatre group that brings their own brand of 'interactive theatre' to the young people of Harlow.

Changed

Leo Sheppard, aged 16, says that Livewire has "changed his life" and how it helped him to build up his confidence.

He said: "Livewire changed my life, it has given me somewhere to go where my confidence has grown and I have found who I am."

He described the production as being "a fantastic show with great dance and music too".

Horse suffers fatal injury over fireworks display fright

A HORSE has died after fireworks terrified the animal so much it suffered a fatal injury.

Redwings, a horse and donkey sanctuary in Harlow, was devastated when Cinders, a mother of one foal, was rendered unable to walk following a nearby fireworks display.

A party the previous evening had spooked many of the horses, as could be seen by the churned up paddocks where they had galloped around in alarm.

Severe

A vet was immediately called to examine Cinders and treat her, but unfortunately X-rays showed that she had partially dislocated the joint inside her hoof – a rare and severe injury.

Distressingly, the damage was irreparable and Redwings' veterinary team had no choice but to put Cinders to sleep.

Cinders and her foal had been rescued in partnership with the RSPCA in 2006. She was very emaciated when she was first discovered and was struggling to feed her young foal who had been born just a few days earlier.

Under the care of the Sanctuary, Cinders regained her health and strength.

But after such a fantastic recovery and many happy years with her, the team at Redwings Ada Cole were devastated to lose her in such a tragic way.

The sanctuary is now issuing a warning to animal lovers as Bonfire Night approaches.

Bonfire season can leave pets traumatised and in the worst cases so badly injured they have to be put down.

Redwings cares for 1,500 rescued horses and donkeys nationwide.

Redwings' education and campaigns manager Andie Vilela said: "We would like to remind anyone planning a fireworks display, however small, to think about horses in their local area."

Cinders had to be put down after injuring herself

Octogenarian Jean takes to the sky for some parasailing while on Turkish holiday

What a great way to celebrate your 80th

By Michael Mutch
star@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A PENSIONER from Harlow who turned 80 celebrated her birthday in style.

Jean Taylor, from Wharley Hook, reached the milestone birthday on September 30 and was whisked off to Turkey by her family who wanted to do something that would last longer than the usual party.

Jean was joined by her three children and their partners, her two granddaughters Katie and Amy and her best friend Irene.

While on holiday, the family coaxed Jean into doing some parasailing.

Son-in-law Neil offered to go up with her and with no fear she 'jumped' at the opportunity.

Her daughter, Debbie Burden, said: "We had been teasing her that we had booked parasailing for her birthday, not imagining for a second she would do it.

"When the time came she just went for it and absolutely loved the thrill and excitement and took it all in her stride.

"We were all so proud of her, but not surprised as she's up for anything, including the biggest water slides."

Her friend, Irene, also added that Jean has always been very active and even showed her up on the beach by wearing a bikini.

She said: "I have known Jean for over 40 years. We have both lost our husbands and do a lot of things together.

"The family thought she needed a holiday. It did us all good. It was like a week's birthday for her.

"She is a very caring and loving person and well-known within the Harlow community. She is some lady."

Jean worked for a number of years as a nurse at Harlow Hospital and continues to work to this day, helping disabled children in the area getting to and from school.

The idea to take her to Turkey was put forward by her daughter, Debbie, who thought it would be a much better experience than a party.

Overwhelmed

Debbie said: "Me and my husband went to Turkey last year and we were staring around the pool and thought it would be nice if we brought the whole family for mum's 80th as there is something for everybody."

"We had a big party for her 70th with family and friends which was amazing and a party to remember, over the last ten years many of her relatives have sadly passed away.

"Mum was widowed five years ago and we thought a party just wouldn't be the same without dad and various aunts and uncles. So a holiday it was, it was fabulous and she was so overwhelmed.

"We all adore her, she really is amazing, sees the best in everyone and everything."

Knife charge

A MAN from Harlow has been charged after he attempted to enter a nightclub armed with a knife.

Darius-Gheorghe Martinescu-Cimplan, 18, was charged with possession of a knife after he was found with the bladed article by door staff at Yates nightclub in Harlow.

The 18-year-old, of Orchard Croft, Harlow, is due to appear at Chelmsford Magistrates' Court on Tuesday, December 12.

He was arrested by two officers on patrol after door staff found the weapon on him following checks in the queue at around 10.30pm last Saturday.

LABOUR has named its candidates for the 2018 local elections in Harlow.

At a packed meeting at Moor Hall in the Stow on Sunday, October 8, six new candidates were selected for wards in the town.

The youngest of them is just 21 years old.

Charlie Cochrane said: "Our youngest candidate is 21 and it's testament to the brilliant work of Harlow Young Labour in bringing so many new members to the Party, that four of our candidates are drawn from our Young Labour group."

Energy

"Their energy and enthusiasm complements the experience of our many standing councillors who have also been re-selected."

"I am confident that together this group will run a very strong campaign for Labour in Harlow."

"Harlow Council, under Labour's control, is making a real difference to people's lives – from getting the first council housing built in the town for a generation to investing in an additional three community safety officers to help compensate for Tory cuts to the police service.

He added: "It's imperative that we maintain control of the council at next year's election and to that end, we will be out meeting with residents every week between now and May – listening to their concerns and sharing our plans for the future of their town."

CANDIDATES

Mike Danvers - re-selected for Netteswell; Tony Durcan - re-selected for Little Parndon and Hare Street; Tony Edwards - re-selected for Toddbrook; Eugenie Harvey - new candidate for Bush Fair; Maggie Hulcoop - re-selected for Harlow Common; Liam Kerrigan - new candidate for Old Harlow; Laura McAlpine - new candidate for Staple Tye; Aiden O'Dell - new candidate for Summers and Kingsmoor; Danny Purton - re-selected for Mark Hall; Chris Vince - new candidate for Great Parndon; Patrick Watts - new candidate for Church Langley.

FUNDRAISER

Thank you for your donations

ON October 5 we sent home a glass 'jam jar' contained within a paper bag for our pupils and family and friends to fill with loose change.

Our deepest thanks go to Freeman & Harding Ltd, Morplan and Borderline Carrier Bags for kindly donating the jars and bags.

Our aim is to continue with previous fundraising efforts to raise as much money as possible to help with the refurbishment of our sensory room within the school.

Our goal is to create an immersive environment which will help to support the sensory needs and wellbeing of our pupils as well as developing the broader curriculum experiences we offer.

So far, in such a short amount of time, we have had a fantastic response, with over 50 jars already returned, far exceeding our expectations.

My plan as the fundraising co-ordinator is to distribute jars across Harlow for local shops and businesses to help support and contribute to our campaign.

POLITICS

I'm proud to represent you

I WOULD like to thank the residents of Toddbrook who overwhelmingly voted Labour in the by-election held on September 28. We were proud to win 52.2 per cent of the total vote – a decisive win and a strong signal from the people of Toddbrook that they want a community which is fair, just and inclusive.

Over the coming months I will work with Toddbrook's other Labour councillors, Karen Clempner and Phil Waite, to represent the ward and ensure that residents feel able to support Labour again in the Harlow council elections to be held in May.

Councillor Tony Edwards

FRACKING

The Government has lied to us

WITH its so-called 'Clean' Growth Strategy, the Government has quietly admitted it lied to the country about fracking and made a shameful admission about its support for oil and gas exploration.

We've long been told that fracking is a necessary evil – a 'bridge' to our clean energy future.

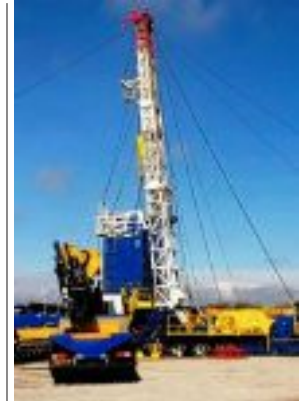

However, it's telling that the 164-page strategy tome fails to mention the dirty, dangerous and destructive process even once.

It turns out we've been lied to all along – and not even the Government believes that guff.

If it did, hydraulic fracturing would undoubtedly be a part of this 'clean' growth strategy.

But it's not.

Instead, it's clearer than ever that Ministers' commitment to fast-tracking fracking across England – while our neighbours in Ireland, Scotland and Wales are all moving towards banning extreme energy exploration – is entirely ideologically driven. It's a commitment that will ensure the UK fails to meet its legally-binding emissions targets

Fracking is a controversial process

under the Climate Change Act – as the strategy makes clear.

The scientific consensus on climate change has never been greater.

The best chance we have of averting catastrophe is by keeping fossil fuel reserves in the ground. Fracking is dangerous and deeply unpopular and it also has profound and acute impacts on local communities.

It's time the Government recognises the seriousness of its national and international climate change commitments and takes heed of the overwhelming public opposition to extreme energy by banning fracking, once and for all.

HEADLINE SPONSORS

IN ASSOCIATION WITH

Sponsor proud to support and work with the best in Essex

Countdown to an awards ceremony which honours the county's top firms

The Essex Business Excellence Awards is fast approaching, with the shortlisted finalists soon to be announced.

Built around the drive to celebrate all that is great about Essex's business community, the awards will praise industries such as customer service, sales and marketing, retail and sales. And, thanks to the presence of sponsors such as HSBC, Wortley Byers Law, Jewson, Choice Finance and London Stansted Airport, the bar has been significantly raised for this year's awards.

Another sponsor bringing prestige to the awards is Equitrade Capital. Formed in 2003, the company was built with a philosophy to build a personal, one-to-one advisory service that removes the barrier of trust between the client and the broker.

Team

Having grown significantly since its roots, the firm now comprises a strong team of senior management, a research centre, trainee and senior brokers, as well as a compliance and legal department; all working to fulfil the firm's founding values and help Equitrade Capital to continue their journey of growth and competitive presence within the UK financial services marketplace.

The Essex Business Excellence Awards is not the first event of its kind that Equitrade has placed its backing behind. In fact, the company always seeks out ways in which to support business events such as these on a national level.

Speaking of their association with the awards was the company's managing director, Amarjet Snehi, who praised the awards for the diverse range of businesses involved. He said: "Equitrade Capital is proud to support the Essex Business Excellence Awards. Our ethos is to create a personal service for clients in addition to developing long lasting connections with local businesses, we believe recognition at award ceremonies is an important way to celebrate and appreciate the high level of service local businesses strive to reach. With the region benefiting from diverse businesses, we look forward to discovering and helping local companies that display true excellence."

Standing proudly behind the Customer Service Excellence award, Equitrade Capital is supporting businesses that have a demonstrable dedication to achieving the highest standard of customer service and position it as their top priority day to day. Speaking of their own customer service relationships, Amarjet said: "We believe being in the financial industry, an excellent level of service creates the best relationships and we achieve this by placing great emphasis on a traditional, face-to-face approach. After all, everybody has a high level of trust with their dentist, doctor, hairdresser and so on, what's the difference with a broker?"

Representatives from

Equitrade Capital will be in attendance on Wednesday, November 29 at The City Pavilion, Romford.

Remembering your loved one

To some you may be forgotten,
To others you are part of the past,
But to us who have always loved you
That love will always last.

Your name we often mention,
Our thoughts are with you still,
You haven't been forgotten,
And I know you never will.

We didn't get to say goodbye
And in our hearts we know not why
God took you by his guiding hand
And took you to a better land,
But in our hearts you'll always stay.
Until we meet again, some day.
Rest in peace.

Our lips do not tell how we loved you.
Our hearts cannot tell how we feel.
But God only knows how we miss you and this lonely feeling is real.
Lonely are our lives without you,
Life to us is not the same.
All the world would be like heaven
If we could have you back again.

FISHING TACKLE GIANT LAUNCHES NEW SUPERSTORE IN THE HEART OF THE NORTH ESSEX COUNTRYSIDE

Advertising feature

End of the road for anglers! Tackle superstore is off the beaten track - but well worth the journey

5,000 ft2 of fishing tackle and bait awaits, at Fishing Republic Clavering

Fishing Republic manager Harry Tucker doing what he does best: fishing Clavering's Specimen Carp Lake

To call Fishing Republic's first foray into Essex 'low key' is to understate matters: the company's brand new tackle and bait superstore - all 5,000ft2 of it - is situated not in a town centre, nor even a business park; it's to be found just outside the picturesque village of Clavering, on the Clavering Lakes angling complex.

But, as 100s of local anglers 'in the know' agree: a visit is more than worthwhile. And since the road in question runs past four well-stocked ponds and a fully licensed restaurant, it gives anglers the chance to get their 'fix', and treat the family at the same time.

Leading brand tackle, year-round fishing and great food, too - all just a short hop from the M11. Despite its undeniably 'rural' location, Clavering is just 25 minutes from junction 8 of the M11; around 30 minutes from Bishop's Stortford, Harlow, Haverhill and Cambridge.

The Fishing Republic store is open seven days a week - till late on Thursdays and Fridays. And it's stocked, quite literally, to the rafters - with fishing tackle and bait, clothing, camping equipment and accessories from top manufacturers including Fox, Shimano, Daiwa, Preston, Nash, Korda and many more.

In turn, the Clavering Lakes complex is made up of four lakes: a specimen carp lake, a match lake and two mixed 'pleasure' lakes.

The specimen lake has a great winter track record, with a number of verified carp to 30lbs+, as well as specimen sized roach (to nearly 3lbs) and perch up to 5lbs.

The match lake is heavily stocked with a range of species, ensuring impressive bags of fish - to 200lbs+ - all year round.

The Silverfish Lake has 20 swims and regularly produces 20lb-30lb bags of bream, roach, perch, goldfish, crucian carp and tench to pleasure anglers.

The Lower Lake is a mixed coarse fishery stocked with bream, rudd, crucian carp, tench, roach and perch.

And if all that weren't enough...

Anglers and their families will find a warm welcome - and a mouth-watering menu - at the fully licensed Clavering Lodge restaurant, where they can enjoy anything from a light snack to a hearty meal, either in the comfortable restaurant or on the beautifully appointed lakeside terrace.

Take a free 'tackle test-drive' with Click-Try-Buy

Even a store as large as Fishing Republic Clavering couldn't hope to carry every make, model and variant of tackle. Which is why the company recently introduced Click-Try-Buy, which allows anglers to select the products they're interested in online - at www.fishingrepublic.net - then have those products delivered to their local store for them to appraise before committing to purchase.

George found happiness in love and friends and family

WHEN the late George Michael decided to make a film about his career, the idea was to focus on his infamous court case with Sony. But it soon became apparent there was a much bigger story to tell.

Here the film's co-director and executive producer David Austin - a lifelong friend of the star - talks about the candid details George wanted to share with his fans.

What inspired you and George to make Freedom?

GEORGE'S publicist Connie Filippello approached me and said "the 25th anniversary of Listen Without Prejudice is sort of looming, you need to go and see Sony".

So she set up some meetings ... and I realised that they were really into working this project. I talked to George about it and he said to me, "you know, we should make a film to support it, because I'm not going to promote it". He said: "I didn't promote it (Listen Without Prejudice) the first time round, why am I going to do it now?"

How did the creative process move forward from there?

INITIALLY, we were just going to make the film about the Sony court case (George took on the company over his contract. He lost the case) the period leading up to Listen Without Prejudice, and just slightly after; that was the kind of arc of the whole thing.

But it soon became apparent that there was a bigger story to tell here because, you know, the loss of airplay in the US, there was the court case itself, there was Anselmo (Feleppa, George's first love who died in 1993), there was George's mother (being diagnosed with cancer).

Once we'd realised we had this kind of mammoth project ahead of us, the first thing that happened was we discovered about 75,000ft of 35mm that David Fincher had shot in the archives at Sony. We had it all restored and we started assembling as much of the archive footage as we could.

And then George gave us all of his private home footage.

George on stage entertaining his adoring fans

George as seen in the film, Freedom and, below, the anniversary release of Listen Without Prejudice, due out next week

What role did George play in producing the film?

GEORGE would come to London and would edit the film. I mean, literally, the film more or less is George's cut. He was editing right up until the 23rd; we had Nile Rodgers over in London filming his part and George was due to go back in on the 27th (of December 2016, George died on December 25) to continue editing, which, sadly, didn't happen.

Did he mind looking back at all this old footage of himself?

NO, he didn't. I was a bit apprehensive to start with because, what actually happened was I was going through a cupboard one day and I found this little Harrods cooler bag. It had all of his home footage that he'd lost, that he'd shot himself, which is all that stuff that you see in the centre of the film.

I talked to him about it and he looked through it, and I thought he'd be nervous to... I'd already cut a few little tiny bits of Anselmo into the film and I thought he'd be nervous about that, but I think he wasn't, he embraced it and he loved it.

Why do you think George felt it was important to include the parts about Anselmo?

HE loved Anselmo, he was an incredibly important person in his life and it just came from George, it came from George's heart. That's really the heartbeat of the film in the centre, you know ... all this home footage, that's the real heart of the film.

The court case is a fascinating element of the film. How did a guy in his mid-twenties go against a whole industry?

I LOOK at kids like Justin Bieber today and think, 'my god, look at this multi-million pound industry around them...' but I think when you're in the eye of the storm, you don't realise it, you're just getting on with the job, rolling your sleeves up, and I think it just all comes naturally.

He was brave to do what he did, that's for sure; a lot of people would have stepped back and would have done as they were told.

But not George, he felt slighted and he believed in what he was saying, and like Elton (John) says, George is a very stubborn person and when George puts his mind to something, he goes for it.

It was a big deal, the court case; I mean, what could have come from that could have been incredible, had he won.

Is the court case something he later regretted?

YEAH, he did actually. He says in the film. And when we were talking about the case and how we were going to handle it - and I didn't realise this at all - but he turned around to me and said how he regretted it. He wished he'd never taken Sony on in the first place, because it dented the armour in his career in America. I think also the fact he discovered that Anselmo wasn't well ... all these things happened at the same time.

What's really interesting that people don't realise is that, while this court case was going on and he was on the stand, he was holding it (Anselmo's illness) very close to his heart; obviously nobody knew, he hadn't come out at the time.

Do you think George ever found happiness?

OH yeah, totally. He absolutely did ... with Anselmo and later on in his life.

You know, he was a very happy, contented man, he found happiness in love and he found happiness in his friends and family. We had a fantastic relationship.

Do you have a sense of where George's career might have gone to next?

IT would have been about writing and giving amazing music and amazing vocal performances full of integrity.

George was one of those people who had a rare gift... when you write music or you sing, making a record is one thing, but if you can resonate with the public, if you can touch people; that's another level.

George had that and I think that's why George's music... there are two tracks in particular we have (which haven't been released) that are just extraordinary pieces of music.

SOUND OUT

Deft punk

She's best known as a punk poster girl, but Hazel O'Connor has proved just as adept at karate and DIY... although, as she tells MARION McMULLEN both have their risks

Hazel O'Connor is preparing for a UK tour

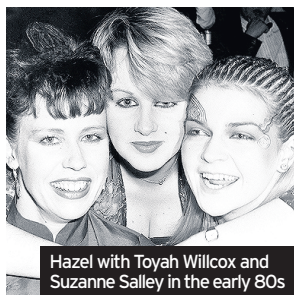

"I'm knackered," declares Hazel O'Connor with a loud laugh, "I've just been putting up some fencing. There's a lot of work involved in fencing, but my dogs are coming soon and I need to get the fencing up to stop them running away - there are a lot of snakes and things out there." She's talking about her home-from-home in the South of France, which she bought around 10 years ago.

"It's isolated and there's such freedom," Hazel explains happily. "My manager always says I'm better when I come back from France... more relaxed." She adds with a quick laugh: "I spoke st French when I first came here, but I'm quite good at it now."

In case, anyone thinks Hazel is living it up in a flashy French chateau, she is quick to set the record straight. "It's not big, it's a little matchbox, but it's a little hidden gem."

"The work on the house is never finished. It was not even a building when I first came here. It was half a building. It had a roof and four walls, but there was no stairway and no electricity."

Hazel promptly set to work and learned how to tackle all the DIY jobs herself needed to transform the property into a home. "Give me a screw gun and I'm happy," she grins. "I quite enjoyed the challenge of it. It might not be as good a finish as a professional, but it's the same end result and I didn't want to ask anyone for help."

Hazel with Toyah Willcox and Suzanne Salley in the early 80s

However, she feared her DIY projects might have been the death of her last year when she was badly injured while trying to finish work on a balcony before a friend arrived with their children.

"I'd been using a screw gun and should have made a hole first, but I was rushing to get it finished so the kids would not fall from the balcony and I forced the screw gun and suddenly something went ping in my chest. I thought I'd busted my heart. My arms just went limp."

"I was looking after my neighbour's dog, Nelly, at the time. I was just lying there and Nelly came along and started licking me. I couldn't move."

It turned out Hazel had broken her sternum, but she waited a week before she went for an x-ray to find out what had happened. "I didn't think there was anything they could do about it and I'm like a wounded animal when I'm hurt - I go to my bed," she points out.

"I remember lying on the sofa watching a Quentin Tarantino DVD and I couldn't get up when it was finished. I couldn't right myself without a huge wave of pain going my chest and body. It kept coming up on the screen 'Play film and select scenes' and I couldn't switch it out." She laughs: "I didn't even like the film very much. I found everything difficult and I'm normally an active person."

But no matter what life throws at the punk favourite, the award-winning singer, writer and actress always comes back fighting. She became an overnight success after her Bafta-nominated portrayal of Kate in the 1980s cult film Breaking Glass and followed it up with the release of three of her most successful albums - Breaking Glass, Sons And Lovers and Cover Plus, which produced hit singles like Will You and Eighth Day.

She will be playing songs from these albums on her forthcoming tour, on which her brother Neil O'Connor will be joining her. It will be the first time they have performed together since a two-week residency at Ronnie Scott's back in 1984. Neil played guitar on her albums Sons And Lovers and Cover Plus and has enjoyed his own success as the frontman of the punk band The Flys.

"It's going to be special," says the striking 62-year-old. "He lives in Canada now, so it's going to be great performing together. It was because of him that I started to write songs. He was in The Flys and I remember going to see them supporting The Buzzcocks. I saw my brother play and thought 'I want to do that.' It was just the energy of it all."

Hazel took up martial arts when her marriage to artist Kurt Bippert ended in 2000, and she was hoping to gain her black belt in Shotokan karate before her DIY injury. "If I didn't do karate I would really be screwed up," she jokes. "I know tai chi is a lot better for the joints, but I love karate too much."

"My friend did her black belt this year, but I had just recovered from the broken sternum and I now have other problems with my back. I have osteoporosis in my back and one good kick could break a vertebrae."

But Hazel is aiming to finally resolve one long-standing problem after the UK tour.

"I was born with crooked feet and I used to hide them in the sand when we went to the beach when I was a child," she explains. "I walked like Sinbad the Sailor. I was supposed to have an operation when I was a 16, but I went away to Holland instead."

"My feet have got very bad now. They are both at 40 degree angles so they are going to have to break them and put them in splints."

"I'm having the operation in December and I'll be on crutches for a few months, but I'll be touring again next year. It's not going to stop me."

■ Hazel O'Connor's 13 date UK tour starts on November 17. Go to hazeloconnor.com for tour details

ST VINCENT - MASSEDEUCTION

IF David Bowie was King of Odd Pop, then St Vincent (Annie Clark) is the Queen and if the spectacular achievement that is Massedeuction is anything to go by - long may she reign.

Ten years ago she released her debut album Marry Me. These days we're greeted with sharp, snappy pop delights, but the trademark fuzzy guitar is still present and there are still slow spells of malaise adding a poignancy to her offerings. Singles New York and Los Angeles are a great indicator of what's on offer but they are just the tip of the iceberg.

"How could anybody have you and lose you and not lose their mind" is a prime example of how lyrics are where Annie Clark's strength lies.

St Vincent has made an album that is consistently great throughout and no song feels out of place. It's catchy, it's clever, it's honest, it's emotional, and you must buy it. You must.

PINK - BEAUTIFUL TRAUMA

FIVE years after the release of The Truth About Love, Pink returns with Beautiful Trauma - very much a continuance from what came before, but, if it's not broken...

The lead track is classic Pink. An uptempo catchy pop song, with strong and heartfelt lyrics. She is lyrically at her best during Barbies, the emotion drips from her broken notes, evoking images of childhoods past and longing for a simpler time.

Pink has matured, but isn't taking it easy, doing it her way. This is an album for the old faithfuls and those looking for chilled-out rich vocals with some edgy ideas.

DOLLY PARTON - I BELIEVE IN YOU

SHE'S penned some of the biggest hits in the world and given that she's been making music for more than 50 years, what could she possibly sing that she hasn't sung? But that's the magic of Dolly Parton.

Her latest venture is a children's album, called I Believe In You, and all profits go to her non-profit charity the Imagination Library, which promotes literacy in children. The songs are catchy, so don't be surprised if you find yourself singing I Am A Rainbow under your breath. They're also educational and inspirational if you listen closely to the knowledge Dolly is imparting. So, there's no doubt she's about to win an entirely new legion of fans.

FOOD & DRINK

ELLA WALKER GETS THE LOWDOWN ON WHAT FOOD MEANS TO BAKE OFF WINNER, JOHN WHAITE

JOHN WHAITE won the third series of the perfect family-viewing cookery show The Great British Bake Off – but off air his approach can be a little more strident.

Get him started on the likes of 'superfoods' ('It's a marketing ploy'), the word 'glow' ('What does this mean? It's a load of BS. You're only going to glow if you're sunburnt!'), the demonisation of sugar ('A bit of sugar never killed my 93-year-old grandma, who'd have a slice of cake a day and three whiskies a night'), or celebrity cookbooks ('So many are absolute cp...') and you'll find him both frank and witty.

He saves the bulk of his ire, however, for 'the clean-eating brigade, the Lycra-clad clan of self-flagellation', who he says have 'taken over' the food world in recent years. 'Food should not be about guilt.'

In his fourth cookbook, Comfort, the Chorley-born food writer, cookery-school owner and telly chef, now 28, is hoping to get people back onto food that's hearty and wholesome. 'You don't have to spiralise vegetables – it's nonsense,' he says, incensed. 'I'd rather die clutching a bag of Haribo and a family-sized Galaxy than a stick of carrot and hummus!'

'Guilt isn't something I associate with food. I've been in a situation where I've had an eating disorder – I was almost too thin to function at one point – and that's because I was so obsessed with my body image.'

The key, he says – to eating, cooking and to life – is to find a way to 'be happy with who you are, and comfortable in your own skin – I mean, don't sit on the couch all day eating buckets full of fried chicken.'

'You've got to look after your body; I do yoga, I go to the gym, but that's not say I deprive myself of the things I need to eat if I'm feeling sad or ill or just in need of

I'd rather die clutching a bag of Haribo than a stick of carrot

John Whaite's new book is all about the love of food comfort,' he explains. 'Be careful of junk, but don't feel guilty about good, home-cooked food.'

Comfort is full of home-cooked goodness, and is divided into sections to mirror mood and cravings – cheesy; sticky; sweet – and every recipe is intended to soothe the soul in some way.

John explains that to him, the idea of comfort, and finding it in food, taps into 'needing to belong and feel reconnected with people or places in which we feel safe'.

It also brings back memories of cooking with his mum as a child – hence why a peppery Lancashire hotpot would still be his death row meal, because it'd remind him of her version.

Since winning GBBO in 2012, John's been candid about how he was shoehorned into the Bake Off champion mould. 'I don't berate them,' he says of his two 'Bake Off' books, 'but they weren't me. The recipes were, but the style of them, the feel, had no reflection of who I am.'

'You win Bake Off and get offered a ridiculous sum to write two books,' he explains. 'I was just out of university, I wanted to break away from the career I was in.'

Despite five years of moving away from Bake Off, career-wise (he's studied patisserie at Le Cordon Bleu and presented daytime ITV cookery show Chopping Block), John is, of course, watching the new series. 'I love it – Prue Leith is amazing, so constructive, she knows more about food than anyone I know.'

The ad breaks? 'A chance to get a tea and a slice of Battenberg.' Homemade? 'Oh no!'

SPROUT SURPRISE

SPROUTS

FOR this dish, John was inspired by Illili, a Lebanese restaurant on 5th Avenue near Madison Square Park in New York City. Serve them alone, or as a side for roasted meat.

INGREDIENTS

(Serves 2-4)

75g dried figs, finely chopped
75ml dry sherry
200g natural yogurt
1tbsp finely chopped fresh mint
1tbsp sunflower oil
500g Brussels sprouts, trimmed and halved 200g sharp-tasting green grapes, halved
75g pecans, roughly chopped
½tbsp sherry vinegar
2tsp ground sumac
Small handful of flat-leaf parsley, roughly chopped
Sea salt flakes

METHOD:

1. Combine the figs and sherry in a small pan and bring to the boil. Boil until the figs cook down and you have a thick paste. Add a splash of water to loosen it into a thick puree. Set aside until needed.

2. Mix the yogurt with the mint and a pinch of salt. Set aside until needed.

3. Heat the oil in a decent-sized frying pan over a high heat. Once the oil shimmers from the heat, add the sprouts and fry, tossing frequently, until they smell delightfully nutty and have started to char. Add the grapes and pecans and fry, tossing, for a further minute, then add the sherry vinegar, sumac and parsley and toss together. Finally add the fig puree and toss to combine.

4. Serve the sprouts on a platter, with the yogurt drizzled over the top.

I'M doing that autumnal sneaky thing that women do – turning up the central heating when no-one is looking. For some reason the house is still on late summer settings but I've definitely moved into cuddle-me sofa blankets and slippers. A trio of red wines has helped my seasonal transition, as I watch the October skies loom gloomily through the window.

Sous le Soleil du Midi Merlot (£5.99, Waitrose, 13.5%abv) This unassuming red is delightfully easy to sip. It's a red for a friend's surprise visit, for a Wednesday night, for a bowl of beef stew. It's a fruit-forward wine, with red fruits, damsons and brambles with a couple of subtle layers such as vanilla and mocha, probably because some of the wine was allowed to sit on the lees and some matured with American oak.

RAISE A GLASS

Pisano Progreso Tannat 2015

(£7.95, thewinesociety.com, 13% abv) The grape tannat – homeland in Madiran in the south west of France – is rustic, with dry tannins. This wine is a much softer affair, like someone has had a word in its ear. The fourth generation of the winemaking Pisano family in Uruguay has taken this grape and created a wine which is oh-so fruity on the nose, brambly and jammy, with the tannins calm and less astringent than its French cousins. A relaxing, warming, and surprising red.

Warwick Estate Cape Lady Cabernet Sauvignon 2015

(£8.50, Morrisons, 14% abv) The nose of this Western Cape wine is a flashback to the blueberry my mum used to buy. There's a good lick of vanilla, a hint of eucalyptus and blackberries. It is soft in the mouth, with some cab sav savoury, woody bitterness offsetting the black fruit. The eponymous lady is Norma Ratcliffe who, with her husband Stan, planted cabernet sauvignon when they bought the South African vineyard in 1964.

ALSO IN MY GLASS.... A few months ago I voted for something close to my heart. No, not a general election, or even Brexit (though obviously I voted in those) but for a wine.

I mentioned it here at the time; I cast my vote for the style, look and feel of a new wine to be created by members of the Co-operative society.

Six months later, this democratically designed wine is appearing on the shelves.

People were asked to select the grape (chardonnay, pinot grigio and a chardonnay-viognier blend) and later its name and then the label design.

The Members' Choice Pioneer Pinot Grigio (£6.99, 12% abv) is now born. The name Pioneer was selected as a reference to the pioneers of the co-operative movement; and the bear label because it references the Californian wine, as the bear appears on the state's flag.

What of the wine? It has light aromas of pear, lychee and apple, with more of the same to taste. It is lacking intensity in flavour or acidity to make a memorable impact when you taste, but hey, it's pleasant enough.

In store from October 19.

THESE chunky pies, which feature in John's new cookbook, Comfort, have all the characteristics of your classic fish pie, but come encased in crisp potato skins and bubbling with cheese.

INGREDIENTS: (SERVES 6)

6 medium baking potatoes
For the filling:
40g unsalted butter
1 leek, very finely sliced
2 anchovies, finely chopped
100g skinless salmon, cut into 1cm cubes
100g skinless pollack, cut into 1cm cubes
100g skinless smoked haddock, cut into 1cm cubes
200g creme fraiche
1tbsp finely chopped flat-leaf parsley
1tbsp finely chopped fresh chives
1tbsp wholegrain mustard
1tsp fine sea salt
1tsp black pepper
For the topping:
1tsp fine sea salt
50g Gruyere, finely grated
1tbsp creme fraiche

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 210°C/190°C fan/gas mark 7. Put the potatoes on a baking tray and bake for one to one-and-a-half hours, until the skins are crispy and the insides soft. Remove from the oven and allow to cool until you can handle them. Reduce the temperature to 200°C/180°C fan/gas mark 6.
2. Heat the butter in a frying pan over a medium heat. Once the butter melts, add the leek and fry until very soft

SAVOURY SELECTION

INDIVIDUAL

– about 20 minutes – stirring occasionally. Put the leek into a bowl with the remaining filling ingredients and stir to mix well.

3. Halve the potatoes and scoop most of the flesh into a bowl – leave about 5mm of flesh against the skin. Fill each potato skin with the fish filling and place on a baking tray – or use a 12-hole bun tin so the filled potato halves don't fall over.

4. Add the topping ingredients to the bowl of potato and mix until fairly smooth, then blob it on top of the fish filling in each potato skin. Bake for 20-30 minutes, until the potato is slightly coloured.

THIS cake has spark and brightness, and is a perfect tea-time treat.

INGREDIENTS: (Serves 10-12)

For the topping: 125g caster sugar; 8 clementines
For the cake: 285g unsalted butter; 285g light brown muscovado sugar; 5 large eggs, beaten; 285g self-raising flour 1½tsp ground cardamom; 1tsp fine sea salt
For the glaze: (optional) 4tbsp apricot jam; 1tbsp water

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 170°C/150°C fan/gas mark 3. Grease a 23cm round loose-bottomed cake tin and line with baking paper.

2. For the topping: heat a pan over a medium-high heat. Once hot, add the sugar and allow to melt and slowly turn to an amber caramel – the sugar touching the base of the pan will turn first, but the sugar on top will soon liquify as well. Give the pan a little swirl as the sugar starts to melt. Once you have a dark caramel, pour it into

CLEMENTINE AND CARDAMOM
UPSIDE-DOWN CAKE

the base of the prepared cake tin.

3. Keeping them whole, peel the clementines, then cut in half horizontally to retain that little hole in the top and bottom. Arrange the clementine halves, hump-side down, on the caramel.

4. For the cake: cream the butter and sugar until really soft. Add the eggs, a little at a time, beating well after each addition, then add the flour, cardamom and salt and beat until incorporated to a smooth batter.
5. Pour the batter over the clementines and gently level it out, being careful not to displace the fruits. Bake for 60-70 minutes, until a skewer inserted into the centre of the cake comes out clean, apart from the odd crumb of cake made soggy by the oranges beneath.

Remove from the oven and allow to cool in the tin for five minutes, then invert onto a plate.

6. For the glaze, simply combine the jam and water in a small pan and bring to the boil. Paint the glaze onto the cake with a pastry brush. The cake will keep for a few days in an airtight tin; it'll actually be that bit better on day two.

BEAUTY COUNTER

Every day is a gift

Because we all need a daily treat come December, says CLAIRE SPREADBURY

CHRISTMAS is coming. Well, sort of. It might feel a teensy bit early to be spending your hard-earned cash on fancy Advent calendars, but the beauty world's big festive launches sell out in no time. So it's best to get organised.

What started out as a cute idea by a few beauty brands is now a big business. There are so many calendars choc-a-bloc with cosmetics, it's a little mind-blowing.

Of course we'd all kill for the Jo Malone calendar, but few of us can afford the £300 price tag (already on eBay for £415, by the way). So here's our pick of the best of the rest...

24 DAYS OF BEAUTY ADVENT CALENDAR, £45, THE BODY SHOP WITHOUT A doubt, The Body Shop is always a strong contender for best beauty calendar each year. gorgeously designed, with cute feel-good messages written on the dinky boxes that contain 24 mini treats, this one holds £88 worth of swag, but is all yours for £45. Available in store and online now.

TECHNIC MINI NAILS ADVENT CALENDAR, £16, JD WILLIAMS WITH 24 mini nail varnishes – one for each day of Advent – this calendar is great for all budgets. There's a good mix of colours too, from vibrant shades, to pastels and glitter. Available from jdwilliams.co.uk from October 19.

SLEEK MAKE-UP 'A GIFT A DAY' CALENDAR, £35, BOOTS LIPPIES, eye pencils, nail varnish and brushes all come together in this glitzy box of treats. Available from Boots stores.

24 DAYS OF GLAMOUR ADVENT CALENDAR, £48, SALLY BEAUTY FOR something a little bit different, Sally Beauty is offering product junkies the chance to beautify their barnet this Advent, with 24 top picks from hair and beauty brands such as Tigi, Wella, Sienna X and OPI. Available online at sallybeauty.co.uk.

EXCLUSIVE ADVENT CALENDAR, £59.50, RITUALS CONTAINING 24 gorgeous Rituals bath and body treats – including their bestselling Hammam Foaming Shower Gel and Sakura Body Cream – this calendar is worth splashing out on. Available from various department stores and online at rituals.com

MORRIS & CO ADVENT CALENDAR, £39, JD WILLIAMS HIDING beautifully behind 24 William Morris-designed doors is the cutest array of travel-sized bath and beauty products. Everything's based around two signature scents as well, so they're perfect for lathering, layering and lazing around smelling heavenly. Available online from jdwilliams.co.uk

NO7 BEAUTY ADVENT CALENDAR, £40, BOOTS IF you want this rather delectable No7 Advent calendar, you'll need to get yourself on the waiting list at Boots.com now. Featuring the brand's must-have make-up and skincare, all set in a glam, gold box, it's perfect for party season and beyond.

2017 BEAUTY ADVENT CALENDAR, £35, MARKS & SPENCER THERE'S even a Christmas Day treat in this uber-cute calendar from Marks & Spencer. Available from November 9, the catch is you have to spend £35 on clothing and home. But, if you do that (and let's face it, who isn't going to spend £35 in M&S in the run-up to Christmas?), for another £35, this can be yours.

CLASSIC BEAUTY ADVENT CALENDAR, £49, L'OCCITANE L'OCCITANE'S Classic calendar has been an instant sell-out for the past three years, so be fast if you fancy this one. Packed with 24 minis, from hand soaps and shower gels, to its infamous hand creams, the whole bundle is worth a total of £87. Available in store and online at uk.loccitane.com Containing make-up, skincare, bath and body treats worth a total of £250, it's worth snapping up.

JACK WILLS BEAUTY ADVENT CALENDAR, £35, BOOTS

THIS calendar features an array of different goodies, from hair bobbles and nail varnish, to body wash and lip balm. And it's not too pricey, either. Available in store and online at Boots.

BEAUTY ADVENT CALENDAR, £25, HOUSE OF FRASER CONTAINING everything you could possibly need for the Christmas party season – glittery make-up and nail art galore – at an easy-on-the-purse price point. What's not to love? Available in store and online at houseoffraser.co.uk

COUNTDOWN TO RADIANT SKIN ADVENT CALENDAR, £150, ELEMIS

OK, OK, so this one isn't so affordable, but if you are going to splash a lot of cash on a beauty calendar this year, make it this one. Packed with decent-sized minis and even a full-size Pro-Collagen Marine Cream (worth £82 on its own), if you buy Elemis products, you may as well spend a bit more on this. In total, the products are worth a whopping £319. Get it while you can, online at elemis.com

LAURA ASHLEY ROYAL BLOOM ADVENT CALENDAR, £40, BOOTS

PRETTY as a picture, Laura Ashley's Christmas calendar will look blooming lovely in the hallway. Within each little drawer, you'll find one of their classic bath or beauty treats, each of which smells divine. Available in store or online at Boots.

THE ADVENT CALENDAR, £55, ASOS SHOWCASING all the brands popular with fashionistas, the ASOS beauty calendar is always worth a look (there's even one for the man in your life this year). Bursting with 24 products – a good mix of make-up, haircare and skincare from brands like Smashbox and Cowshed – and a discount for the online store, which you could use on a New Year party dress.

SOAP & GLORY IT'S A CALENDAR, GIRLS! £40, BOOTS SOAP & Glory fans, rejoice – there's a whole Advent calendar, crammed with beauty, body, make-up and skincare must-haves. Each one guaranteed to make your day more fun. Available from Boots stores.

■ WE love Soaper Duper for making planet-friendly products that don't cost the earth. As well as being about as recyclable and eco as can be, they also support clean water charities in the Third World.

Now the big green bottles are going into Tesco stores nationwide and there's a new Super Juice Passionfruit Body Wash, £6.50, and Hand Wash, £5, in the line-up. They smell so gorgeous, there needs to be a matching body butter ASAP.

■ WE are big fans of Origins skincare – especially its Overnight Mask, £25 (ideal for when you've had too many late nights). Now Origins is teaming up with Marks and Spencer beauty halls where there will also be beauty experts on hand to talk you through the ranges.

■ THE 1960s were swinging on the runways during Paris, Milan and London Fashion Week, so it's time to brush up on your eye liner technique. If, like us, you are just hopeless, Rimmel has developed a liner with a wingshaped stamp applicator making it ridiculously easy to create the perfect flicks. CELEB SECRET

IT'S five years since model Rosie Huntington-Whiteley first slipped into a silky negligee for her M&S Autograph range, and to mark the occasion she's just unveiled her new Rose Gold fragrance, £28.

It's a warm blend of musk, amber, roses and spice, which promises to evoke Rosie's favourite night in: a cosy evening by the fire. Well, you need a bit of heating when you're in silky lingerie the whole time, marksandspencer.com

HOT HOUSE

AMAZING HOME BEHIND UNASSUMING EXTERIOR

An unassuming property in Harlow has recently been put on the market, and offers much more than just prime location. Located in a quiet cul-de-sac of Herons Wood, Harlow, this home is being marketed by Century 21 Property with a guide price of £490,000.

Modesty has always been a desirable quality, and the modest appearance of this house is truly humbling once its inner charms have been discovered.

Offering four generously-sized bedrooms and located close to some of Harlow's best primary and secondary schools, this would make an exemplary family home.

The downstairs space is quietly dominated by a huge extended lounge space that comes complete with solid oak flooring.

One of the highlights of this property is the secluded rear garden that has been beautifully maintained by the previous owners, which boasts a patio, a sprawling lawn space and a large selection of shrubs and plants.

Intelligent landscaping and a modest front of house make it hard to anticipate this garden space extends to 100ft wide, and makes it easy to understand why internal viewing is recommended.

The upstairs landing leads you into two ample double rooms, a spacious single and a commanding master bedroom that share the top floor with a smart white bathroom suite.

Several other features of the detached property include a broad open-plan kitchen, a study, utility room, cloak room, downstairs WC and a single garage.

A short walk away is the picturesque beauty of the River Stort, and the ultra-modern Harlow town centre, which is now recognised as one of the key shopping and leisure centres in Essex complete with an indoor shopping centre.

Just a five minute drive from the hospital and Harlow Station, this location also offers great road links into the city, surrounding towns and to Stansted Airport, making it an ideal property for anyone tackling the morning commute.

Sitting pretty

Buying a new sofa can be stressful. Three experts share their top tips and which trends to plump for. GABRIELLE FAGAN reports

Over the course of a sofa's life (which lasts, on average, 11 years) it will witness 1,236 arguments, 2,105 kissing couples, 3,135 films watched by families, and overhear 2,631 phone conversations, according to new research for Furniture Village.

So, it's all the more important then, to choose a sofa that doesn't just look good and fit in, but can withstand all that activity and emotion.

Experts reveal their buying secrets to help you choose the best seat in the house...

'BIG FAMILIES SHOULD OPT FOR A STATEMENT SOFA'

"A sofa's one of the most used and best-loved pieces of furniture in our home," says Malcolm Walker, director of product at Furniture Village.

"Far from just being a place to sit, it can be the centre of many pivotal moments in family life – whether it's arguments and the subsequent making up, or a power nap after a long day."

"But the sheer amount of time that we spend on a sofa, along with the number of activities that we do while lounging on it can mean it needs to stand up to a lot of wear and tear – particularly if you have children."

As the seasons shift from summer to autumn, we have seen the re-emergence of earthy hues and tactile finishes, explains Malcolm.

"Worn leathers and raw materials pair together to create a rustic decor, perfect for those looking to achieve a sense of warmth and comfort," he says.

"Velvet continues to enjoy a renaissance around this time of year, with jewel tones and brass finishes accompanying this textile, to introduce a sense of sophisticated luxury to any scheme."

"The two key concepts to take into account when choosing a sofa are the space you are working with and your own personal style."

"A sofa will naturally become the focal point in any space, so ensuring that it captures the look you want is essential."

"If your home caters for a big family, then a statement sofa will work wonders. A large corner unit may be a good option to consider, as this offers flexible seating solutions, as well as adding structure to open-plan spaces."

"If you're working with a more compact room, consider a raised sofa with smaller proportions and slender tapered legs, which will help create the illusion of space and light."

■ Malcolm's favourite sofa... "The Nicoletti Movimento Recliner Corner Chaise is my top pick, as its deep, luxurious foam-filled seats and optional touch sensitive power recliner function make this a stylish and superbly comfortable choice," says Malcolm.

'CHECK THE BASICS'

"We're fans of sofas that are big enough to lounge around on, look good and most importantly are super-comfy," says Charlie Marshall, founder of Loaf.

"People are becoming more adventurous with colour in their homes, as sites like Pinterest are providing people with inspiration, making it easier for them to get bolder colours right."

"Our new fabric collection for 2018 is full of vibrant hues, including Carnival (a red/pink coral hue), Maize Yellow, Clean Green and Deep Blue Lido, in velvets and linens."

"We recently updated our Souffle Sofa as a modular design, and each unit can be customised in a different fabric and colour for a statement look, or in one fabric for a classic look.

Charlie Marshall, founder of Loaf

"Check a sofa has a solid beech frame, held together with screws and dowels, rather than glued and stapled chipboard versions, which aren't as durable and break easily. If you have your very own team of 'stain spreaders' (young children and pets) removable covers are a good choice, as they can be easily whipped

'GREEN AND ORANGE ARE THE HOTTEST SOFA COLOURS RIGHT NOW'

"We're always keeping abreast of trends and this year, in Italy, at Salone del Mobile - which showcases the latest in furniture and design from around the world - we saw two colours dominate - burnt orange and forest green," says Alison Hill, creative director at DFS.

"Forest green reflects our desire to bring the 'outside in' and orange is a complementary colour to green.

"Curved-back 'cocooning' furniture is increasingly popular, too.

"We've really seen craftsmanship trending in recent years - highlighted in detail on upholstery and frames.

"Raising furniture forms on plinths - another popular look - provides a sense of continuous space in a room, and is an advantage if you're constrained for space.

"All cushions are not created equal - some people like a firm and supportive feel, while others want something soft and squishy to sink into.

"We have fibre filling for a soft feel; a foam core for balanced softness, and support and foam for a supportive, slightly springy feel.

"An extra set of loose covers are available to buy with our sofas, too."

■ Alison's favourite sofa... "The Floss is off for cleaning."

Charlie advises: "Always measure up before buying. Check a room is not only large enough for the size of the sofa, but also that its proportions are right.

"High-back sofas can be overpowering in a smaller room with a low ceiling. Fitting a new sofa through narrow doorways can be tricky - ask for access advice - bolt-on arms can be a great solution."

■ Charlie's favourite sofa...

"The Pudding Sofa is a fresh take on a classic design and it has a super-deep comfy seat.

"It looks great in our classic linens and neutral fabrics, as much as it does in our bolder choices, such as Burnt Orange velvet."

GOODBYE CHRISTOPHER ROBIN'S HOME

The heart-wrenching story of author AA Milne's relationship with his son, the 'real Christopher Robin', is currently playing out in cinemas all over the UK.

Goodbye Christopher Robin, starring Margot Robbie and Domhnall Gleeson, has garnered rave reviews.

The movie uses the real country home of AA Milne as a film location for several scenes, a property which has been on the market for over a year at £1.895 million. AA Milne bought the property in 1924 as a country retreat for his family, who went on to live there for more than 30 years.

The 16th-century Grade II listed country house close to Ashdown Forest in East Sussex is set in 9.5 acres, with the 100 Acre Wood and Pooh Sticks bridge just down the road.

It has six bedrooms and four reception rooms and many original features including exposed timbers and beams, oak framed windows plus flagstone and polished brick flooring.

There's also a grand oak-panelled dining room as well as gardens, a paddock and woodland.

The house also includes a statue in its garden of Christopher Robin and a sundial with the engraving: "This warm and sunny spot belongs to Pooh, and here he wonders what it's time to do".

Cotchford Farm has now sold and the vendor's patience has paid off - agent Savills found a buyer prepared to pay full price for the property.

What next for the Playboy mansion?

When publishing mogul Hugh Hefner died recently aged 91, he was surrounded by family and former 'playmates' at his Playboy Mansion in Los Angeles. The house, where Hefner lived and held many of his parties for the rich and well-connected, was the second property from which he steered his empire.

Initially headquartered in Chicago, Hefner decamped to California in 1971 and bought his second Playboy Mansion there for $1.1 million. It's within one of the most upmarket neighbourhoods in Los Angeles called Holmby Hills, where Hollywood stars hang out. The 22,000 sq ft mansion features a pipe organ, wine cellar, secret doors, a bathhouse, pool and a zoo complete with monkeys.

Next door used to be Hefner's 'party compound' including a grotto, accommodation for the women who worked for him as Bunnies and staff rooms, but this was sold in 2013 for $17.25 million. Last year as his health declined, Hefner sold the Playboy Mansion for $100m to his neighbour, food and drinks heir Daren Metropoulos who agreed to buy the property but let Hefner remain there until his death.

The deal was handled by local real estate firm The Agency in Beverley Hills. Now, Metropoulos says he plans to incorporate the site into his existing home, which he bought from Hefner's ex-wife and former Playmate Kimberley Conrad. The interior of Hefner's former mansion is to be stripped out, but the exterior will remain intact, Metropoulos has said. More information from TopTen RealEstateDeals.com

Hefner bought the California Playboy mansion in 1971

Imagine a time when poets were rock stars, their work read avidly by millions of fans. That time was not so long ago.

Until only 70 years ago poets such as Edgar Allan Poe, WB Yeats, John Keats, Samuel Taylor Coleridge and Thomas Hardy were as famous as Ed Sheeran is today – and possibly more so.

The biggest star of this lyrical firmament, it can be argued, was William Wordsworth whose poem I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud endures today as a shining example of the poetic artform.

And this house in the Quantock Hills of Somerset is where Wordsworth and his sister Dorothy lived for two years and where they renewed their friendship with Coleridge, who lived nearby.

HOME OF POET UNDER THE HAMMER

This proved fruitful for the two Romantic poets.

While living at the property, Wordsworth penned one of his most famous poems – Tintern Abbey – while Coleridge wrote The Rime of the Ancient Mariner.

Called Alfington Park, Wordsworth's former home is now due to be auctioned on October 31.

The Grade II property, which in 1959 was converted into a hotel but has been vacant for several years, includes a huge basement, 16 bedrooms, three reception rooms, staff accommodation in the attic and a huge basement.

The winning bidder will also get a tennis court, a cottage, a 55-acre deer park and woodland and walled garden. The property has a guide price of between £500,000 and £750,000.

More information can be obtained from kivells.com or call 01392 252262.

TOWER TYCOON'S TRADITIONAL RESIDENCE

Not many people remember property developer Harry Hyams but anyone who has been shopping on London's Oxford Street will have spotted his handiwork.

Harry changed the capital's skyline during the boom years after the Second World War and most famously built CentrePoint, the huge modernist tower that still looms over London's West End.

The tycoon, who died in 2015 aged 87, was not a fan of modernism for his own homes, as his mansion in north London shows. He had the property designed and built in 1955 by architect Richard Seifert but, rather than angular cement, it's solidly Regency. The six-bedroom property, the drive of which was stacked with Harry's classic cars, is for sale through agent Aston Chase (207724 4724) for £16 million.

The CentrePoint

LOWRY'S OLD HOME ON SALE

Matchstick men painter L.S. Lowry would have raised a wry eyebrow if he'd known his paintings would one day sell for millions, as his famous Station Approach did three years ago.

The canvass fetched £2.3 million at a Sotheby's auction and depicts crowds walking towards Manchester's North Western Exchange Station, which has since been demolished. And the Manchester-based Lowry would have been equally amazed to know that his former home in the suburb of Mottram would one day go on sale for £325,000, or approaching twice the average price of a home in the city.

Lawrence Stephen Lowry lived at The Elms from 1939 until his death in 1976 and it's where several of his well-known and more controversial canvasses were painted. These include a famous painting of a local agricultural fair completed by Lowry the year he moved to The Elms. There he also painted The Cripples, a canvas of a crowd in a park which includes several people using crutches or with missing limbs.

Lowry's former home is now for sale and, say the couple who are selling it, still features spots of paint in the room where he used to paint. There's also a Blue Plaque commemorating his time at the property on its façade.

The Elms is a semi-detached house with four bedrooms and has been refurbished by the current owners. It also has two reception rooms, a study as well as a main bathroom and a shower room.

YOUR GARDEN

GROW APPLES WITH EASE

As fruit-lovers celebrate harvest with Apple Days this month, HANNAH STEPHENSON speaks to Gardeners' World presenter Monty Don who offers tips on how to grow them

Monty Don loves apples. He has around 60 different types at his garden in Longmeadow, Herefordshire, growing in various forms – some are big trees, others stepovers, or smaller trees.

They are among the most popular fruits in this country and yet people have a fear about growing apples, says Monty in his latest book, Down To Earth.

"They somehow feel it has to be a big tree, but it doesn't. You can grow stepovers or espaliers, you can grow fans or cordons. You can train the fruit to fit your space," he explains.

"People also get very worried about what are actually quite trivial afflictions. It could be a bit of mould on a leaf or a bit of bitter pit on the apple, but by and large apple trees are robust. They don't need much looking after."

Some people are also confused by rootstocks, he observes. "It's moderately complex because all apples are grown on a different rootstock, so the roots of one tree are joined at the graft to the trunk and branches of another tree. The root dictates the size and vigour and shape of the tree, and the bit above the root dictates the fruit.

"So you could have my favourite eating apple, Jupiter, as a dwarf, a cordon or a great big tree, but you'd need a different rootstock for each of them."

"All you need to know is, I want it to be this big, my garden is this size, what rootstock do you have? And a good garden centre should be able to tell you."

Here are Monty's tips for apple-growing beginners...

The apple is one of the most popular fruits in the country

1 FIND A SUNNY SPOT

Apple trees need sunshine and good drainage. Don't grow grass right up around them.

Clear the grass for at least a 1m radius around them until the trees are as big as you want them to be, then you can let the grass grow back up to the trunk.

Grass will take a lot of moisture and nutrients they need.

2 PLANT MORE THAN ONE

Some apples are self-pollinating, but you should always plant more than one. There are eight groups of apples, which are numbered solely on when they produce their flowers.

Be inspired at an apple day event

Number one is the first to blossom, and number eight the last.

If you have two apples, one from group one and one from group eight, they won't blossom at the same time and if they don't blossom at the same time, they can't cross pollinate.

Either have two of the same group or one from either side, so if you have a group three apple, you should either have another from group three or one from group two or one from group four.

The earliest apples start blossoming at the beginning of April and the latest blossom at the end of May, but the

Set up your own community garden

As urban areas increase, so does the need for community gardens.

Over the next 12 months, organic drinks brand Honest and environmental regeneration charity Groundwork.org.uk will be working together to bring more green spaces and gardens to Britain's urban sprawls.

Groundwork community gardener Sean Gifford helps local groups set up community gardens in a range of areas from housing estates to disused car parks. He takes these groups through the process, from design to plant selection.

Ben Coles, Groundwork director of communities and environmental services, offers the following advice to get a community garden started:

BUILD MOMENTUM BEHIND THE IDEA

Find out how many people are interested in it – the more momentum from locals who are keen to do it, the more voices you have to be heard. Organise a meeting with neighbours to see how it could be taken forward.

CHECK SPACE AVAILABILITY

Find a spot you think would be suitable. Speak to your local authority partner or landowners or whoever is responsible for the land. Contact your housing department, landlord or housing association.

CONSIDER FUNDING

Sometimes councils will refer you to an organisation that can help, other times the residents will find their own sponsorship.

This might come through local businesses, a charity, or with guidance through organisations such as the Federation of Community Farms and City Gardens (farmgarden.org.uk).

MOVING FORWARD

"We would look at the needs, from designing and constructing a growing space to providing people like Sean to help the groups get up and running, and to recognise that some of them don't know a lot about what they can grow and how they would look after it. It's always a tailored response," says Ben.

IT MAY NOT BE EASY

Ken Elkes, spokesman for the

You could make a community garden and turn a grey space green

Federation of Community Farms and City Gardens, says: "The bottom line is that most groups run on a shoestring and find it difficult to get enough income to sustain and expand their community gardens. There's a lot less funding around than there used to be... but there are ways of starting up and sustaining a community garden."

"Most don't need a huge amount of money. Most people start out as a group who come together and do everything on a voluntary basis."

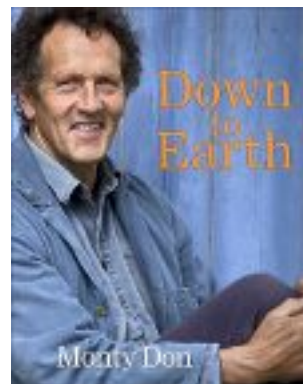

"We can give advice on funding opportunities and have access to information and resources, acting as a conduit between the members and corporate sponsors."

There are some important things to remember when planting a new apple tree

Knowing when to prune can make a difference

5 GET INSPIRED ABOUT VARIETIES AT APPLE DAYS

My advice is to go and taste as many different varieties as possible, see what they look like.

Use it as an experience to extend your knowledge about what apples look and taste like.

When you go to the supermarket, you're just not going to have that opportunity.

Then, if you find an apple you really like that you can't buy in a supermarket, that's the one to grow.

■ Down To Earth by Monty Don, above, is published by DK, priced £17.99. Available now.

flowers have to be open at the same time to pollinate.

3 LEARN HOW TO PLANT NEW TREES

Dig a wide hole no more than one spade's depth deep, loosen the hole and the sides, but don't add manure or compost.

Plant the tree slightly higher than it is in the pot or, if it's bare-rooted, slightly above soil level, so it's on a tiny pyramid. Firm it in well, so it's planted in a slight cone, not a well, because more trees die from being over-wet than too dry.

Water it well, stake it and mulch it thickly with either garden compost or wood chippings, to keep the weeds down and the moisture in.

You don't add compost to the hole because you want the roots to grow out into the soil.

If you put compost into the hole, the roots will stay and curl around and become almost pot-bound. Roots need to grow horizontally as quickly as possible.

Most feeding roots are within a spade's depth and horizontal. They don't go down, they go sideways.

4 KNOW WHEN TO PRUNE

If you prune hard in winter, you will get lots of shoots coming back and none of those shoots will have any fruit on them.

If you want to reduce the size of the apple tree, do it in summer. If you want to stimulate it to grow bigger, do it in winter.

"Almost all apples produce their fruit on spurs and the spurs only develop on wood when it gets to two or three years old.

LEADER OF THE PACK

The battle for supremacy in the large executive saloon sector is fiercely fought.

The good news for the driver, apart from shelling out well north of £30,000 for the privilege, is that the competition means innovation and quality are at a premium.

Take the 5 Series BMW, arguably the leader in the executive saloon segment.

It has captured a certain type of customer who like what they get and are happy to pay for it, so evolution is the key to keeping them happy.

The latest version, the seventh generation, has a newly developed modular engine range with improved efficiency in both petrol and diesel power units and the introduction of a new plug-in-hybrid model. All model feature a slick eight-speed auto box, while the M Sport model tested here features four wheel drive.

It also offers a raft of hi-tech innovations such as gesture control, while retaining its superb road manners and sporty credentials. It also offers an increase on an already spacious boot.

This particular model offers serious performance, hitting 60mph in just 5.4 seconds, yet still delivering impressive economy.

It still looks an imposing vehicle, slightly larger than its predecessor the design is slippier, with a reduced drag coefficient for better economy. Economy is further enhanced by the lighter materials used in construction which reduce weight by around 100kg.

The trademark BMW kidney grille is flanked by standard LED headlights. To the rear the light clusters reach deep into the sides of the car, while the twin exhausts which are now arranged symmetrically on both sides.

The interior feels pure executive with high-quality soft touch finish and feels much roomier with better space for rear seats passengers thanks to the increased size of the car.

The leather upholstery cushions occupants in comfort while all the latest gizmos are placed within easy reach.

The lateral layout remains with the 10.25-inch touchscreen sitting in the middle of the dash, controlled by the rotary iDrive controller. This controls major functions such as navigation, the superb sound system as well as a number of connectivity apps and other hi-tech wizardry, the list is too long list.

A neat innovation is the parking cameras which gives a 360degree view from above, makes parking a breeze and even allows for remote self-parking.

The leather seats offer excellent safety and comfort together with multi adjustability.

Gesture Control, is an option which allows, by means of a sweep of the hand, altering various functions, while the latest generation of the head up display is also available as an option.

It is also packed with the very latest safety technology.

On the road the car is a joy to drive, with blistering acceleration produced by the six-cylinder 265bhp beast under the bonnet, fantastic agility and limpet like road holding, especially with the four wheel drive.

The suspension set up means the driver feels in control at all times. Floor the throttle and you will be breaking the motorway speed limit before you know it. So care is needed, it's a thrilling drive though for such a big car.

There are three easily-selectable drive modes, Sport, Comfort and Eco Pro, which automatically select the engine, steering and suspension settings required for each mode.

Despite the rip-roading pace, the interior retains a cloistered quietness, with barely a murmur from the six pot diesel except under hard acceleration, while the slippery profile means wind noise is all but absent.

The only intrusion came from the large tyres which became noisy on lesser quality road.

With prices starting at just over £36k, it's a quite a package, as you would expect from the brand and for even more practicality, the tourer or estate has now joined the range.

Either way the BMW still right at the forefront of the executive saloons.

AN ALLURING UPGRADE

While Peugeot bosses here currently have their minds focussed on the launch of their all-new 5008 SUV as a result one of their most successful selling family models has undergone a major facelift which may slip under the radar of the motor buying public.

The 308 hatchback and estate (station wagon as it's officially called) has been one of the mainstays for the French car maker in terms of competing in the affordable family motoring sector.

Again with a choice of petrol or diesel engines this new-look 308 offers a wide choice of models with the usual line-up of trim levels, starting with Access, then Active followed by Allure before moving on to the GT Line and Gti.

For starters this time around there's a distinctive new front end with a more stylish profile with the bonnet, bumper and grille plus new LED lights giving all the range a more sporty and modern look about them.

The 308 was always a decently equipped and comfortable family motor whatever trim level was chosen and this new face lifted line-up is no different with prices starting at around £18,570 and again more than competitive when compared to its immediate rivals in the market place.

Briefly driving the new mid range Allure hatchback and apart from those improved exterior looks sit inside the car and again it's easy to see the changes to the interior which are more subtle than staggering but do give a bit of a more classy feel and look.

Standard levels of equipment are good while some rivals may have more on board but of course they are more expensive.

For the driver the new 9.5 touch screen is welcomed and it's also where most controls are easier to use – some of the old buttons and switches have been dumped – along with a multi-function steering wheel while the sat nav has sensibly been updated.

Peugeot 308 Allure PureTech 130 Auto review by David Ward

The 308 has always been if not outstanding a nice car to drive and this is now further enhanced by the changes made which includes a 140kg weight reduction over the outgoing model and again the Allure package represents best value for money. As for which engine to choose the choice has to be one of the Peugeot's PureTech petrol engines rather than a diesel with the turbocharged three cylinder 1.2-litre 130 driven here the pick of the bunch.

There is a slightly less powerful 110bhp and a non-turbo 82bhp available from the same 1.2-litre engine while those diesel driver fans can now opt for a new 1.5-litre diesel in the 308 which replaces the old 1.6-litre.

Such has been the recent development of much smoother and responsive automatic transmissions for use specifically in smaller powered cars then opting for this in the Allure driven has to be a serious consideration. Yes, it does cost around £1,000 more than the six-speed manual but with the added advantage of steering wheel shift paddles and the overall smoothness of the gear changing up and down it's so efficient and relaxing to use. The automatic EAT6 gearbox is Peugeot's own – it's called the Efficient Automatic Transmission – and has already been used successful in other Peugeot models.

The Peugeot developed PureTech engines have already received widespread praise and deservedly so and the 130bhp version is ideally suited to the 308 and further complemented by that automatic gearbox.

The 308 interior space has not changed much – the lack of rear passenger seat space is the only downside when compared to class rivals – and again the 308 boot space is good with a basic of 470 litres and extended to 1,185 with those rear seats folded down. Overall the 308 remains a good compromise as a long distant cruiser and at the same time a sensible and practical everyday car for the family because it's comfortable and practical.

Nissan Micra Tekna IG-T 90 review by Edward Stephens

SHARP AND SLEEK NEW MICRA

BY the end of my time with the latest version of Nissan's smallest car I had become quite used to the same rhetorical question from anyone I showed it to.

"That's a Micra?"

The response served to highlight the radical transformation the little car has undergone to distance itself from its predecessor.

In sharp contrast to the rounded, upright stance of earlier models which – in the nicest possible way often struck me as the sort of car a Mr Man character would drive – the new Micra is sharp, angular and very sleek.

And concealed rear door handles create the illusion that this car's a coupe.

Now in its fifth incarnation the Micra is longer, wider and lower than earlier models and definitely far more trendy.

It's also gone upmarket, with some superb kit on board, but of course this is reflected in the price with the range now starting from just under £12,000 but rising to £18,765 for the diesel version, top-of-the-range Tekna model.

The petrol-fuelled Tekna Micra had a basic price of just under £18,000 but with extras that increased to just over £20,000.

This of course is a world away from the budget-priced Micra known to previous generations of buyers but one look at the lines of the new car tells you why.

The interior is equally impressive too, with two-tone leather seats (an optional extra), two-tone soft touch dashboard, a seven-inch touch screen for the sat nav and various on-board systems and a nice leather-covered, flat bottomed steering wheel.

Put the Micra into reverse and half of the screen shows you what's behind you via a rear view camera while the other section gives you a 360 degree view around the car so there is no excuse for colliding with anything.

There's an excellent Bose sound system which included one particularly feature I really liked – speakers set into both sides of the driver's headrest for great music on the move.

For a supermini there is generous space in the front and reasonable leg room in the rear, and I don't think anyone can complain about the deep, 300-litre boot.

This car was powered by the smallest engine in the range, just 898cc and three cylinders.

An engine of that size a few years ago wouldn't have pulled the skin off a rice pudding – as they say – but new technology means this Micra is not only lively but good fun to drive.

To be picky I occasionally found it a bit lumpy in first and second gear when cold but apart from that it's a nice, responsive unit which, audibly, is only distinguishable as a three pot at high revs.

And of course one of the bonuses of such a small engine is its economy.

The on-board computer gives you an average after each journey, and while more often than not mine was in the high 50mpg range I did record one 62.4mpg without really trying – and that's higher than the official figure from the car maker.

The new Micra is packed with features for the safety conscious family driver including a system which will brake the car for you if it thinks you are going to collide with another car or pedestrian, lane departure warning, hill start assist and automatic high beam/dipped beam headlights.

It's all a long way from the first Micra which took to the roads in 1983 and became a best seller for Nissan.

With the appeal of this new model, however, it could well be that history is about to repeat itself.

Ford Mondeo ST-Line review by John Murdoch

PRACTICAL ALL-ROUNDER

AT A GLANCE

- Model: Ford Mondeo ST-Line Estate 2.0-litre TDCi Powershift AWD
- Price: £31,295
- Mechanical: 180ps, 1998cc, 4cyl diesel engine driving four wheels via 6-speed automatic gearbox
- Max speed: 137mph
- 0-62mph: 9.5 seconds
- Combined mpg: 55.3
- Insurance group: 31
- CO2 emissions: 137g/km
- Warranty: 3yrs/60,000 miles

The days when the Mondeo dominated UK roads are long gone but the big Ford is still a fine product even if it is seen in smaller numbers.

In estate form the current model is the best looking Mondeo yet, and it offers stacks of space and comfort in a handsome package.

Now produced in Spain, this generation arrived at the tail end of 2014 and was available in the USA long before that.

It still looks fresh and offers bags of room for five with 525 litres of boot space with all the seats in use and 1,630 litres when the rear seats are folded.

The estate is available in a variety of trims with a choice of engines and the car I sampled was the ST-Line estate with the 2.0-litre TDCI diesel engine with all-wheel-drive and the automatic Powershift gearbox.

The ST body styling kit gives the big estate a sporty look and in standard form costs £31,295 to put on the road.

From behind the wheel the Mondeo estate feels exactly the same to drive as the hatchback and there is no extra boom noise generated in the large cabin.

The Mondeo was always the finest handling car in the family sector but the current model is more comfort based and is at its best when cruising rather than being chucked round tight corners.

The combination of the auto box and the fine diesel engine provides a relaxed feel – ideal for long motorway journeys. Shift paddles on the wheel allow you to play with the box but it is best left to its own devices.

Handling may not be as sharp as its predecessor but the ride comfort is excellent and this is a very refined big wagon. The AWD system means that there is bags of grip to cope with all weather conditions and the steering is accurate.

With 180ps on tap, the big Estate is good for a top speed of 137mph and the sprint to 62mph takes 9.5 seconds. It has enough grunt to make it a very good tow car and the emissions are listed at 137g/km.

The claimed combined fuel figure is 55.3mpg for this four-wheel-drive version but expect to get around 50mpg in real world conditions.

This particular model is very well specced and comes with Rock Metallic alloy wheels, alloy pedals, a mini spare wheel, front sports seats, sports suspension, ambient lighting, LED running lights and LED tail lights, the SYNC 3 system with eight-inch touchscreen and Ford DAB navigation system, emergency assistance, dual zone climate control and power folding door mirrors.

You also get that body styling kit, a Quickclear heated front windscreen that is superb in winter, power operated windows, cruise control, hill launch assist, a Thatcham alarm, electric parking brake and a tyre pressure monitoring system. It is also impossible to put the wrong fuel in thanks to Ford's EasyFuel system.

In addition, the car also came with a detachable towbar at £600, lane keeping aid with traffic sign recognition at £525, blind spot monitoring system at £500, adaptive headlamps at £900, rear privacy glass at £200, a power tailgate at £400, rear view camera at £250, active park assist with front and rear parking sensors at £545 and active city stop at a further £200.

A couple of other less interesting options took the total price to a hefty £36,815 – taking it well into the premium sector.

A practical and solid all-rounder the Mondeo Estate is a good alternative to the many SUVs on the market but cheaper versions make more sense.

SKODA'S LITTLE CHARMER

Skoda's baby car has been reborn and it's a charmer. The compact city car first appeared as part of the VW Group line up in 2011 but this summer underwent a facelift to front and back, the inside was revised and re-equipped and it has the latest clean engine technology underfoot.

Prices have crept up but it still represents good value for money and in the five-door version we tried the new Citigo offers a lot of practicality even if room is a compromise.

Essentially it has the same engine as before in two power outputs. It's small and lively with low noise until you really push on and the five-speed manual gearbox did sometimes mean it ran out of breath.

A good progressive and light clutch eases the neat and direct gearchange, the power flows underfoot and it will easily hold its own on a motorway until it faces a long gradient.

Then it can need a downchange, sooner if loaded, but the well balanced feel to the steering is matched by reassuring brakes underfoot and a secure parking brake.

So you don't really have any concerns with the major controls and the secondary switches are close to hand and worked well around the steering wheel.

A few buttons are hidden low on the fascia while prominence has been given to the climate controls and the system works very well to fill the little cabin with air at a desired temperature. Vents are not very precise and the powered front windows are welcome.

All the windows are big thanks to the low waistline and that means it provides good visibility, ideal for urban parking or precisely placing on a winding road. Wipers and headlights do a good job in adverse conditions.

The Skoda Citigo is agile and light, and this helps economy as well, but what surprises most of all is that it is really comfortable over all but the worst surfaces.

It soaks up bumps and tarmac breaks without a problem, it rolls slightly but not too much on corners and it generally stays glued to the road on tight turns.

It's impressive, particularly when you look at the modest power and reflected in its acceleration from rest or through the gears which need anticipation to fully exploit abilities.

Driven within its limits the Citigo is economical and running costs are very low.

For the driver or passengers it has good access, a reasonable but not remarkable amount of room and you have to consider what you'll carry in the boot or need to fold down the rear seat. The rear sill is high for shopping to unload and it has modest oddments room throughout.

Essentially it is what it says, a city car, but you just know it would relish a run to the country and a chance to get to the seaside.

With the vivid colours in the Citigo palate there is also the possibility that an older driver would welcome the chance to act young again. It would certainly be fun.

STAR Expert (Full-time product expert)

At Mercedes-Benz Hertfordshire, we believe that it's not just the Mercedes-Benz cars that we proudly sell and service that define us. For us, it's our people who are the driving force behind a business that has a long and successful association with the world's oldest and most prestigious brand.

The Group prides itself on providing the best possible service to our customers and as a STAR Expert, you will be integral to ensuring that each and every customer receives an exceptional experience.

Your key responsibilities will include: professionally welcoming customers to the business, in person and by telephone. You will help customers to understand the full benefits of owning a Mercedes-Benz by providing them with first hand support with complex technology questions.

As you are likely to be the first team member that customers encounter, you will therefore be core to ensuring that they are delighted with the service they receive. It is important that you are adept at remaining calm under pressure; have excellent interpersonal communication skills; and understand the importance of coordinating effectively within a team environment.

The key aspects of this role are:

Offering exceptional customer service by using non-pressured customer advice.

Ensuring you keep up-to-date with the latest product information, and abreast of competitors' product information, to provide a critical comparison to customers.

Proactively approaching customers in the showroom to offer help and advice and introducing customers to sales executives when they express an interest in buying.

Working closely with Sales and Aftersales colleagues to provide an excellent handover service for customers and planning and managing the test drive process as required.

If you are driven and have the desire to build a successful career with us and can demonstrate good personal presentation with a friendly demeanour, initiative, organisational skills, team-working and job and self-motivation, please email your CV and covering letter to careers@landinc.co.uk.

HARLOW DISTRICT COUNCIL PROPOSED TEMPORARY FOOTPATH AND RIGHT OF WAY CLOSURE ORDER 2017

Harlow District Council in exercise of its powers contained in Section 111 of Local Government Act 1972 and all other enabling powers, and after consultation with Essex Police and the Essex County the Highway Authority propose to make the above Order.

The effect of the Order will cause the closure of the existing footpath right of way numbered 35 lying east to west and wholly situated on the London Road EZ site to be closed for up to approximately 16 weeks.

A copy of the proposed Order, Plan and Statement for Reasons for proposing to make the Order is available for inspection online at www.harlow.gov.uk/public-notices and on the public notice board at the Civic Centre, The Water Gardens, Harlow, Essex, CM20 1WG.

Copies of the same may be acquired on payment of the Council's photocopying charges.

Any objections to the proposed Order should be made in writing, stating the grounds on which they are made, to be received by the undersigned not later than 12:00 noon 10 November 2017.

(Low Hill Road, Roydon) (Temporary Prohibition of Traffic) Order 2017

Notice is hereby given that the Essex County Council intends, not less than seven days from the date of this notice, to make the above Order under Section 14(1) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984.

Effect of the order: To temporarily close that length of Low Hill Road, Roydon in the District of Epping Forest, from its junction with Glen Faba Road to its junction with Parkfields, a distance of approximately 1423m. The closure is scheduled to commence on 27th November 2017 for 3 days, or where stated on a valid permit (EP201EH2228126 – Essex County Council). The scheduled dates may vary for these works with appropriate signs showing and/or displayed on www.roadworks.org. The closure is required for the safety of the public and workforce while drainage works are undertaken by Essex County Council.

An alternative route is available via Epping Road, Water Lane, Epping Road Roundabout, Tylers Road, Hamlet Hill, Netherhall Road and vice versa.

The Order will come into effect on 26th October 2017 and may continue in force for 18 months or until the works have been completed, whichever is the earlier.

ALAN JOHN PAMPLING (Deceased)

Pursuant to the Trustee Act 1925 any persons having a claim against or an interest in the Estate of the above named, late of Harlow, Essex, who died on 09/07/2017, are required to send written particulars thereof to the undersigned on or before 27/12/2017, after which date the Estate will be distributed having regard only to the claims and interests of which they have had notice.

'We paid price for not sticking to plan'

Hawks defender Baker reflects on Dulwich defeat

By Charlie Coe

sportsdesk@hertsessexnews.co.uk

DEFENDER James Baker said Harlow Town were "undone" for not sticking to their game plan, after his side were comfortably beaten 4-0 at high-flyers Dulwich Hamlet on Tuesday.

Town were looking to build on their 2-1 win over Harrow Borough on Saturday but were seen off by clinical finishes from Nyren Clunis either side of goals from Michael Chambers and Reise Allassani.

Baker, who has been a mainstay at the centre of the Hawks back four this season said: "We had a game plan but we didn't stick to it. If we don't do what we're supposed to do, against a good team, then you're going to get undone."

Rather than drop off and soak up the Dulwich pressure as per manager Danny Chapman's requests, Town's back four played a high line and were punished on 16 minutes when Hamlet's Marc Weatherstone was able to play a long ball into Nyren Clunis for the opening goal.

When asked about what specific changes should be made in order to get Harlow back to winning ways, the centre-half prioritised better link-up play between defence and attack.

Advanced

He said: "We need to get the ball in better areas for our players in advanced positions. If we can do that we can create goals like we did on Saturday."

New left-back Jay Siva, who joined Town from Bostik League Premier Division rivals Tonbridge Angels prior to the win over Harrow, also admitted that Hawks failed to stick to their pre-game instructions.

He said: "We tried to go toe-to-toe and match up with them. You can't come to Dulwich and do that."

"We were underdogs but it was the manner in which we lost that the manager wasn't happy about."

Siva is one of two defensive signings Harlow have made in the last month, along with two new keepers in the midst of an injury crisis, but the left-back is confident that Hawks can rebound from a poor start that leaves them sitting just two spots off relegation.

"We want to climb the table and I think we have the players to do it," he admitted. "Once we get a good run of games I'm sure we'll turn it around and be absolutely fine."

Harlow will look to bounce back from defeat when they host mid-table Margate on Saturday.
